

A detailed illustration of a character with long, straight white hair and a serious expression. They are wearing a bright yellow choker with a circular pendant. The character's chest is visible, showing a large, circular, reddish-brown mark on the left side and a smaller, similar mark on the right side. The background is a light-colored brick wall.

S4DSQU1D

s4dsqu1d.neocities.org

INFERNA

[PUBLIC ROUTE] - Leilei Torture

Everything on this book is 100% fictional, no living being (human or otherwise) was harmed when drawing or writing these situations. All characters are over 18 and none of them are based off any real person. Do not ever try to reproduce any of the things depicted on this page in real life. The immoral acts and/or dialogue of these fictional characters are not a representation of the author's actual beliefs.

If you think any of the themes described below will cause you any level of distress, please do not read it

CONTENT WARNINGS:

Fictional depictions of:

noncon | limbless | clit torture | gore | nullification | denial | torture | urethra insertion | urethra expansion
| piss | prolapse (uterine and anal) | tmpeg | lactation | description of birth/labor | mindbreak | despair

A long time ago, Inferna went through a really long war that almost made both angels and demons go extinct.

In order to avoid that, a peace treaty was signed, dividing the land in two and creating what is known as the "Pet System" and the "Draft."

A couple of times per year, in South Inferna, a Draft is done in order to separate angels who are real people and the ones who are soulless, and thus, apt for breeding.

The latter lose any rights a person would have and are treated as property from the day they are picked until the end of their lives. They are sent to North Inferna to serve as "pets" to demons.

The original goal was for them serve as breeding vessels, demon babies would be raised by their demon parents, angels would be send back South to be raised by angels. This is how most personal pets are used, but because there are more than enough pets, some of them end up being turned into entertainment.

Centuries have passed since the system has been implemented and, although relations between demons and angels have greatly improved, they see no need to do away with it, as it has become ingrained in their culture.

Anyway, this is a story about a certain angel named Soleil that, as soon as he turned 20 (and thus entered in the Draft pool), ended up being picked.

Because no one bought him, was made into a Public Relief Pet and gained a new name, fitting for his new "job".

This is a documentation of Leilei's training.

DAY 01

After serving as a Public Relief Pet for a few years, Leilei's trainers have decided it's finally time to change his regular post to one more suited to his unique abilities.

The main goal with this new setup is to take full advantage of his extremely fast regeneration powers. His wounds close in mere hours, his limbs grow back in a matter of weeks, sometimes days.

Every angel has these powers to some degree, but for them to be as good as Leilei's is extremely rare. Not many pet angels can fill a "Stress Relief Pet" role, so when one that can take the "job" lands in Public Service, they are eventually changed into the role. Often permanently.

Not only were his limbs removed, rendering him completely defenseless to all the abuse, due to a pet's collar being connected to their spinal cord, it allows trainers to fully control their nervous system.

His urethra is kept shut by a special device, only opened up to be emptied at a trainer's discretion. In addition to that, his most important and sensitive parts are spread open and fully exposed, making it easy for anyone to freely torment him in any way they see fit.

Lelei had grown used to being roughly fucked daily, but he pet isn't used to the new ways in which he is now being used and, soon enough, this results in some "behavioral problems", tanking his latest reviews.

The whimpering and yelping is apparently way too troublesome for most users, so, now his trainers are now trying to correct this behavior.

The first thing they do is encourage visitors to be as rough as they can, not only providing a variety of tools for tormenting Lelei, but also hurting him themselves. They think that, if he can learn to endure the absolute worst, the rest will come easy enough.

They know there's no convincing a pet to just stop reacting so strongly to pain, no matter how much positive reinforcement one uses, so, instead, they hope he'll just get used to it.

Of course, this is just the first hurdle they need to overcome, but they can't proceed unless they succeed at it.

First thing the pet has to endure is being whipped.

The whip itself is made in a way that will hurt quite a lot, even with minimal effort from the wielder.

It has heavy, very sharp, spiked iron balls on the tips, which both bruise and tear at the skin, causing relatively deep cuts.

After just a short while, Leilei's torso is entirely covered in cuts and bruises. Surprisingly, he actually doesn't make too much of a fuss, as this is a level of pain he is relatively used to.

As the punishments get more and more painful, it's unlikely his good behavior will last for long. But for now, this isn't something anyone needs to worry about.

Not only does the pet's regeneration make it so this can be repeated daily with no risk to his life, most angels live for a very long time.

Even Public Relief Pets usually live to see at least 100 years of age. Leilei is barely 30. He still has a very long time to get used to his 'new' life.

When the impact moves downwards to his most sensitive parts, the poor pet finally starts gasping and yelping, trying desperately to move his useless, restrained limbs, hoping against hope to somehow dodge the ongoing assault.

People usually find the squirming from Stress Relief Pets quite cute, which is why it's more common to have their limbs amputated rather than kept intact with their movement turned off via their collar.

Regardless, they could do with less screaming.

Until he learns to endure pain in a way that satisfy his users, his 'punishment' will continue.